Search for missing trio has gone 'really quiet,' brother says

Amber Alert. Police wrapped investigation at home where couple, grandson last seen

JEREMY NOLAÏS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

As the search for a missing boy and his grandparents reached the two-week mark Sunday, a close family member said he fears the worst as the investigation into their disappearance appears to have turned "really quiet."

Alvin Liknes, wife Kathryn Liknes and five-year-old grandson Nathan O'Brien were last seen in their home in Calgary's Parkhill neighbourhood June 29. Police have said a violent incident occurred inside the residence and it's believed the missing trio did not leave voluntarily.

Missing trio: Alvin Liknes, Kathryn Liknes and Nathan O'Brien. METRO FILE

Over the weekend, police performed a "final sweep" of the Parkhill property before releasing it Sunday morning. No other clues about progress in their investigation were provided, but searches were scheduled to continue at Calgary's Spyhill Landfill and at an Airdrie acreage owned by the parents of investigators' lone person of interest, Douglas Garland.

Randy Prevost, Kathryn's brother, said he was hopeful about the direction police were taking their investigation early on, but he's been left in the dark.

"Lately, it's been really quiet. I haven't heard a thing that's changed," he said.

"It's eating away at you constantly. It's hard to break from it. The killer of the whole thing is not knowing anything past what we know today."

By early Sunday evening, well wishers had placed a candlelight display on the front lawn of the Liknes home. A sign hanging from it read "I believe."

There were other signs something was amiss. Chalk had been used to circle several stains on the front driveway. A blue residue was left on the door where it appeared forensic teams had dusted for fingerprints.

Flu. Alberta plans push to get people vaccinated

Albertans can expect to see a media blitz urging them to get immunized as the province works to boost vaccination rates for the upcoming flu season.

According to the annual health report for 2013-14, the province fell well below its 75 per cent target for influenza immunization in children between the ages of six and 23 months, with only 34 per cent vaccinated last year.

While that number has improved over the last five years, the Alberta government will be issuing a "visible" campaign to meet their target, said Chief Medical Officer James Talbot.

"We're encouraged that the numbers are going up and we're moving towards the target," said Talbot, noting 2013 was the second-best immunization year ever, with 27 per cent of the population getting immunized.

"At that level, we would still get a significant number of deaths prevented and a significant number of hospitalizations prevented," he said.

For the upcoming flu season, the government has bought enough vaccines for 45 per cent of the province, a 20 per cent increase over last year.

Double the number of pharmacies will offer the vaccination too, said Talbot.

"We found that was really popular with people last year," he continued. "It gives them easy access."

Young people will be the focus of a social-media campaign to run some time in the near future.

Connect Card tapped for July 2015 rollout

Transit. After delays with electronic payment system, Calgary going with company that failed to deliver back in 2012

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

After a previous failure and delay, Calgary's long-awaited "Connect Card" for electronic payment of bus and C-Train fares should be available in a year's time, according to a city report.

"New monthly and new single-ride fare options will be introduced with the Connect Card — July 2015," reads the report due at the transportation and transit committee this week.

Coun. Shane Keating, the committee chairman, said Sunday he's confident the technology will actually work as it's meant to this time around.

An electronic-fare system was initially supposed to be rolled out by mid-2012, but in November 2012 the city terminated a contract with Spanish group Telvent, citing repeated delays and failures during trial runs of the system.

A year later, Calgary Transit director Doug Morgan announced the city had come to a new agreement with Telvent — since renamed Schneider Electric — that would see a functional system completed for $8 million, including $2 million the city had already paid the company.

Keating said the city plans to undertake beta testing with a group of its own staff and citizen volunteers in the coming weeks and months to "work out the bugs" in the system before the full rollout next year.

Nineteen-year-old transit rider Ebby Anekwe said Sunday she would welcome an electronic-payment option for both monthly passes and single rides.

Connection

The Connect Card option is to be rolled out in conjunction with changes to discounted Calgary Transit fares for youth, seniors and low-income riders.

- The tap-and-go, account-based system allows users to transfer credits from a lost or damaged card.

"It definitely would make it easier if you don't have to get paper (passes)," she said. "And if you can load (money on) it online, it's really helpful."

Mother, son identified as Chestermere rollover victims

Fatal crash. 'Once-in-a-lifetime' friend and his mother to be honoured with well project

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Family and friends of a mother and son killed in a Calgary-area vehicle rollover hope their legacy lives on in the form of a well in their native Pakistan.

Syed Jahanzaib Kamran was at the wheel Tuesday and his mother Shazia Kamran was in the passenger seat when their vehicle rolled on Highway 1 at Range Road 283. Police believe speed and driver error were factors.

Syed, 19, died instantly on scene. Shazia, 41, was rushed to hospital but later succumbed to her injuries as well.

The Kamran family had only recently moved to Chestermere after living in Calgary for years and establishing a successful catering company.

"What we had as a family was great," said a sombre Syed Shahzaib Kamran, a son and younger brother of the victims. "We had so much love and care for each other."

Despite their loss, grieving loved ones are attempting to create something positive out of the tragedy, launching an online fundraising campaign to build a $9,000 solar-powered well in the Kamrans' home country of Pakistan.

As of Sunday evening, more than $3,000 had already been raised toward developing the well and 1,500 people had supported a Facebook page raising awareness about the project.

Ahmad Subhani said Sunday he couldn't think of a better way to honour his good friend. He and Syed went to high school at James Fowler together and graduated last year.

He said Syed had eyes on a business career of some sort and left behind his brother, two sisters and a father.

"He was always a respectful guy towards everybody," Subhani said of his friend. "He was nice, loving and caring for everyone. Even if you had a problem and he didn't know you he'd stand next to you until everything was solved."

"He was one of those people you meet once in a lifetime."

Islamic Relief Canada

Once the fundraising goal for the well project in honour of Syed Jahanzaib Kamran and mother Shazia Kamran has been met, the money will be turned over to Islamic Relief Canada, who see through development of the solar-powered system. For more information, head to youcaring.com and search "Building a water well in Pakistan in their memory."

City to complete buffered bike lanes by end of July

One of the concrete islands that make up the buffered bike lanes under construction on Northland Drive N.W. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Partially separated bicycle lanes are under construction next to Northland Village Mall and should be complete by the end of July, according to the city's cycling co-ordinator.

Tom Thivener said the city opted to convert what were previously bicycle/bus lanes along Northland Drive N.W. to buffered bike lanes after receiving feedback from both cyclists and motorists.

"There's so much room on the road that we can do these bicycle buffers," Thivener said of the route on the east side of the mall that once had six lanes of car traffic.

The city changed one lane in each direction to bus/bicycle lanes in 2012, but many motorists found the paint-only lanes confusing while cyclists found them unsafe.

"We got quite a bit of negative feedback about that," Thivener said.

While resurfacing the road, the city is now also installing concrete islands and painting a wider buffer to better delineate the bike lanes. Buses will now only use the lanes at bus stops, not for travel.

The total cost for the cycling-related component is $575,000, Thivener said.

The changes are part of Calgary's "complete street" approach to building new infrastructure for a variety of travel modes when undertaking road maintenance. Similar plans are in place for Bowness Road and Shaganappi Trail. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Rest spots

City to pilot Car2Go-specific parking stalls

Compact Car2Go automobiles will soon have their own designated rest spots in close proximity to downtown intersections, says the city's parking boss.

Troy McLeod, general manager of the Calgary Parking Authority, said he believes a pilot project will launch in the "next month or two" that would grant the popular car-sharing program its own spaces in the seven-to-eight-metre buffer between an intersection and the first designated parking stall for general public use.

McLeod said the cars are all uniform size and the city could conceivably add eight spaces per intersection for a total of 450 in the downtown core.

The long-term goal, he said, would be to have all Car2Go vehicles parked in the compact stalls, leaving all other spaces for general use.

"It offers a good balance," he said. "There is a significant supply of on-street parking to offer in these zones, and then it increases

Daily closures expected for weeks as fire rages

Icefields Parkway. For real-time info on highway closures due to a wildfire, check Alberta 511

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Anyone travelling between Lake Louise and Jasper on the Icefields Parkway in the next six to eight weeks should plan to do it between 7 a.m. and 2 p.m., Parks Canada warns.

Outside those hours, a stretch of the busy summer route is expected to be closed daily as crews battle a large wildfire in the area.

"We're trying to make it as predictable as possible with road closures," Parks Canada communications officer Tania Peters said Sunday. "We do still have to manage that fire close to the roadway."

The closed section is about a 45-minute drive north of Lake Louise, Peters said, between Saskatchewan River Crossing Resort and Waterfowl Lakes Campground.

While the precise location and exact time of the closures could change with conditions, "barring anything major" Peters said the highway should be open daily for that seven-hour period, when traffic is typically at its busiest.

Nicole Veerman was caught by the closure Saturday afternoon while taking a Sun Dog Tours bus between Calgary and Jasper. The bus made it partly up the Parkway but had to turn around and return to Banff, she said, where passengers were left scrambling to find hotel rooms on short notice for as much as $300 a night.

"There was a lot of frustration and anger," she said.

An alternate bus made it through on Sunday morning, when the fire's impact was still evident. "(The fire) was smouldering just a couple metres off the highway," she said.

The Spreading Creek Wildfire is burning in an eastern portion of Banff National Park and extends eastward beyond the park boundary. Crews from both Parks Canada and Alberta Environment are working to control the blaze.

ParkPlus. Free parking for 15 minutes is worth a look, says Coun. Chu

Offering up free parking for quick pit stops in the downtown core is still a worthwhile endeavour, says a Calgary councillor, despite projections it would cost the city's parking authority up to $5 million annually.

Coun. Sean Chu had asked Calgary Parking Authority officials to analyze the potential impact of making on-street ParkPlus spaces free for motorists stopping for 15 minutes or less.

A final report on the matter is due back later this year, but authority general manager Troy McLeod said projections suggest the grace period would result in $4 million to $5 million less in parking revenue, about a quarter of the total earnings from on-street spaces.

"It's technically possible to do.... Price does provide the way to manage the street (spaces)," McLeod said.

Chu, however, questioned the lost-revenue projections when reached Sunday.

Currently

The Calgary Parking Authority adopted a demand-based price model in January that increases parking rates by 25 cents when a specific zone is more than 80 per cent full and drops by the same amount when that zone is less than half full.

"Most of the time, people are going to park there, run in and run out, and take their chances anyway," he said.

"I'm talking about making it more convenient, for small business especially. People just want to pick up dry-cleaning, pick up food, pick up whatever. They would be able to go in without worrying."

City councillors will review a report in the third-quarter of 2014 and decide whether to take further action. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Lac-Mégantic. Quebec to add $60 million in aid

Quebec is granting an additional $60 million to compensate victims of last year's catastrophic train derailment in Lac-Mégantic, which left 47 people dead.

Municipal Affairs Minister Pierre Moreau told a news conference that $37 million of the compensation would go to the owners of businesses in the disaster area.

A large swath of Lac-Mégantic's downtown was destroyed when a runaway train loaded with volatile fuel oil jumped the tracks and exploded.

The government says it heard the complaints of those affected by the disaster in the town of 6,000 and wanted to bring some balance to the treatment of their cases.

Business owners had complained they weren't getting help fast enough.

Moreau says there will be meetings this week with 37 business owners and that the compensation is available now.

There will be incentives offered to owners who want to rebuild their businesses in Lac-Mégantic.

Moreau says if they wish to leave the area, they will be compensated for their sites based on fair market value. To this day, much of the damaged downtown remains off-limits as decontamination work continues. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Russia separatist insurgency against the Kyiv government.

Ukrainian officials denied that any Ukrainian shells had fallen on Russian territory. Andriy Lysenko, a spokesman for Ukraine's National Security and Defence Council, placed blame for the attack on the rebels themselves.

Ukraine's Donetsk, where rebels have gathered to regroup after a major Ukrainian offensive last week, was quiet on Sunday, but some 150 people from the settlement of Maryinka, on the outskirts of the city, were moving into dormitories at a local university after their homes were bombed during the night.

Artillery fire in Maryinka late on Friday left at least four people dead, but the number of casualties in the latest bombing was unclear.

Ukrainian defence officials said Sunday that the air force had performed 16 sorties and carried out five airstrikes on rebel positions over Saturday.

News agency Interfax-Ukraine cited Lysenko on Sunday as saying that several dozen rebels had been killed and rocket launchers and armoured vehicles were destroyed in the attacks. He also said that seven servicemen had been killed and 30 wounded in the past day.

Following the loss of at least 19 soldiers in a rocket attack by the pro-Russian militia Friday morning, Ukrainian officials claimed to have killed large numbers of rebel combatants, although there has been no independent verification.

The target was the Gaza police chief. He survived the Israeli airstrike in a cousin's home with critical injuries, but 18 family members were killed, including five children and teens.

The weekend attack highlighted Israel's broad definition of military targets in its current offensive against the Islamic militant group Hamas. The army says those targets include senior Hamas activists and their homes, even as it insists it is doing the utmost to spare bystanders by

Thousands flee homes amid bombings as Israel prepares possible ground invasion

Thousands of Palestinian residents of the northern Gaza Strip fled their homes on Sunday and sought safety in UN shelters, heeding warnings from the Israeli military about impending plans to bomb the area in the sixth day of an offensive against Hamas that has killed more than 160 people.

The fighting showed no signs of slowing, despite international calls for a ceasefire and growing concerns about the mounting civilian death toll in Gaza. U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry spoke to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and voiced "readiness" to help restore calm, while Egypt, a key

Can BlackBerry rise from the ashes?

HOW TO ROLL
Alison Griffiths
metronews.ca

Is the BlackBerry phoenix rising from the ashes — or perhaps is the recent show of share-price strength merely a puff of smoke from a dying fire? The five-year high of $12.01 on July 5 gave investors renewed hope that there may be life left in Canada's once-favourite tech stock.

Just to recap (while rubbing salt in the wounds of those who bought BlackBerry in the pre-recession years and still own it), the cellphone maker was trading at $148 in mid-2008. Five years later, it had slid to just over six bucks.

If you look at a short-term chart, it has been a jolly though volatile ride to a nearly 50 per cent increase in the past year. BlackBerry is also outperforming Google, Samsung and the Nasdaq itself in the first half of 2014. Bully for those who took the chance last summer.

But back to the smouldering ruins of this formerly great company. Is there any real reason to buy now or, for that matter, to hold? The latter is a particularly important question for investors who have made a nice gain in the last few months.

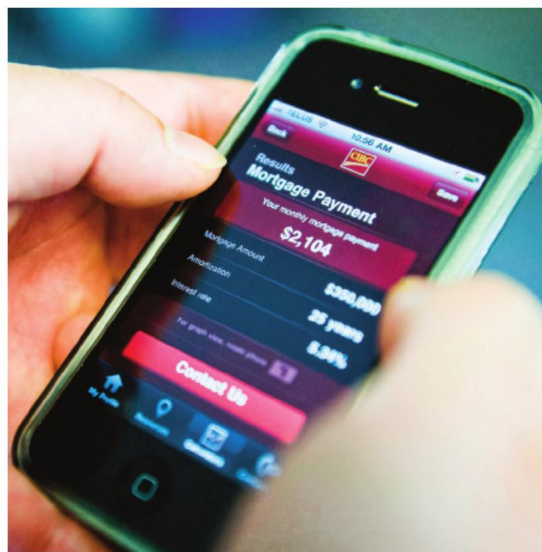

If there is hope for BlackBerry, it likely lies in one place: software.

Wait a minute! BlackBerry's claim to fame has always been hardware, the phone that U.S. President Barack Obama loves.

But all of BlackBerry's post-recession failures have been in hardware. From last year's delayed Z10 phone to the PlayBook tablet all the way back to the Bold phone — which the iPhone quickly stomped into oblivion — it has been hardware that keeps tripping up BlackBerry.

Though the new, very square (literally) BlackBerry Passport smartphone is launching in September, CEO John Chen is racing to dominate the Internet of Things with software that will seamlessly connect your entire life to the Internet. He has made a number of moves in that direction since taking over the helm last November.

Aside from anything else, if Chen is even marginally successful and manages to staunch BlackBerry's cash bleed, he will turn the company from a short seller's delight into a takeover target.

Smartphone to replace the bank teller?

A smartphone user checks their bank account with an online banking app from CIBC in this 2011 file photo. Smartphones are set to be the next big thing in consumer banking, holding the promise of everything from fewer trips to the local bank branch or ATM to the convenience of tap-and-go payments at retail outlets. But a number of hurdles still need to be overcome. Many expect there will be an even bigger jump in usage if the banks, merchants and telecom companies can figure out a better way for customers to make purchases with their smartphones by tapping a retail terminal at the counter. ## CRA's offshore tax snitch hotline a hit

The Canada Revenue Agency has 80 new leads on taxpayers who may be hiding money offshore after getting hundreds of calls on its new snitch line.

The flush of information has even the agency's harshest critics acknowledging the initial success of the hotline, established Jan. 15 to help ferret out billions of dollars stashed overseas.

The so-called OTIP line — for Offshore Tax Informant Program — was promised in the March 2013 budget but took 10 months to set up.

As of May 31, more than 800 people rang the number, drawn by a cash reward system that gives the tipster up to 15 per cent of the amount that the agency eventually collects in taxes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

CREEPS HAVE NO PLACE AT RODEO

The Stampede has an image problem.

I'm not talking about the Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth. I'm talking about the culture and attitude that envelops our city for 10 days in July. It has nothing to do with the rodeo or the rides and everything to do with a disregard for normal human behaviour after hours of drinking in beer tents packed to the gills with cowpokes during our yearly celebration of all things western.

I'm about the biggest advocate there is for anyone to be able to go out, slap on a cowboy hat, throw back a few beers and dance the night away. However, if what I've been seeing on my social-media feeds are any indication, the anything-goes rules-don't-apply attitude that seems to permeate this time of year needs a complete tune up.

After seeing a startling number of posts from girls reporting being groped, touched without consent and spoken to in a manner completely unbecoming of another human, I feel the need to speak up and say something about what's turning into a massive problem.

High Plains Drifter
Greg Callsen
calgary@metronews.ca

Earlier this week, I asked my Facebook friends and followers on Twitter to share their worst Stampede behaviour stories, and the results were shocking.

One female friend recounted a story of being groped on the C-train, with her young daughter beside her, by a group of young men in cowboy hats in broad daylight.

When she turned around and struck them with her purse, the reaction was of complete indignation and an attitude of "it's Stampede, what's your problem?"

I was presented with several tales of girls out with their female friends and constantly being propositioned, touched and then called sluts when they refused the advances. Again, the reaction was one of complete indifference, with shades of "look how you're dressed, you're asking for it."

Wrong any day of the year

As the party knobs get turned up to 10 during Stampede week and the rules fly out the window, we need to work together on changing these attitudes.

This kind of behaviour is not OK. It needs to be addressed all year long, but as the party knobs get turned up to 10 during Stampede week and the rules fly out the window, we need to work together on changing these attitudes — not only for everyone's safety, but for the image it can give our city.

Revealing clothing is not an invitation for any kind of sexual advances, just as dressing like cowboy is not an invitation for a six-shooter showdown on main street.

Just because the lines get blurry, it doesn't mean that the lines don't still exist.

WE ACT: CANADA DOES GOOD

'Lots of littles make a big' for volunteer

Each month, we profile a Canadian who's up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet:

Who: Michelle Gabrielle, dedicated volunteer

Where: Halifax, N.S.

What: Every month, Gabrielle chooses a charity, asks for their wish list and then passes the list around to her family, friends and co-workers. In this year alone, she has collected donations for Out of the Cold, an orphanage in the Dominican Republic, My Best Friend's Closet, Hand in Hand, Phoenix House and Family SOS. She also finds time to volunteer at the St. George's Soup Kitchen on a weekly basis and donated clothing and toys this past holiday season. She even gave away the boots off her feet.

Why did you start volunteering? "My mom would knit mitts if she had the extra yarn — which wasn't very often — for our equally poor neighbours. She taught me to remember what we came from, and I hope that I never lose that."

Apes franchise

Monkey business boosts box office

Dawn of the Planet of the Apes thumped its chest with a $73 million opening weekend. According to studio estimates Sunday, Fox's Planet of the Apes sequel rode excellent reviews and high anticipation to become one of the summer's best debuts. It easily surpassed the $54.8 million opening to 2011's Rise of the Planet of the Apes, the reboot of the 1970s chimp franchise. The big opening helped give the summer box office a shot in the arm, but it wasn't enough to stop an overall downward trend. # Better Call Saul shows Breaking Bad world before Walter White

Spinoff prequel. Bob Odenkirk plays slippery lawyer Saul Goodman

Vince Gilligan is feeling the weight of expectations. How do you follow a monster hit like Breaking Bad?

The spinoff show Better Call Saul is a prequel to the Emmy-Award winning series and stars Bob Odenkirk, who plays everyone's favourite greasy lawyer Saul Goodman. Asked whether revisiting the same world he created posed new challenges, Gilligan acknowledged it was daunting.

"It's always daunting," he said, adding that it would also be a challenge if it were a completely new show and a whole new universe.

"The chips will fall where they may," he said. "But anything worth doing is worth taking the risk of abject humiliating failure over."

Gilligan was speaking at a television critics conference in Los Angeles to promote the upcoming fall season.

Gilligan said he wanted to do a prequel because he was still intrigued by the slippery Saul character. He said other beloved characters, such as meth distributor Gus Fring (played by Giancarlo Esposito) could be back as well.

"We're figuring out just how, if and when to perhaps see some of these characters," says Gilligan.

Meanwhile, the prequel will be set in 2002, before Saul meets Walter White, who is played by Bryan Cranston.

Michael McKean (This is Spinal Tap) joins the cast along with Michael Mando (Orphan Black) and Jonathan Banks from Breaking Bad as the fixer Mike Ehrmantraut.

Like Breaking Bad, the show is shot in Albuquerque, N.M. The first episode was directed by Gilligan.

Coming in 2015

The show was originally slotted for November, but has now been delayed until 2015 for the 10-episode first season.

- The reason? Gilligan told television critics he is "slow-as-mud as a TV writer. I always have been."
- Thankfully, AMC and Sony allowed Gilligan to write Better Call Saul at a "stately" pace.
- "We want to think everything through and I think that pays dividends," says Gilligan.

Katie Holmes is a lover of literature

STARGAZING

Nick Cannon may be playing Richard Pryor in an upcoming biopic. That's an excellent choice. It will make a great double-bill with Ryan Seacrest's expected gritty turn as Lenny Bruce.

BBC publishes a public plea for people not to share the contents and secrets of five Doctor Who scripts leaked to the web. That was the well-considered thing to do, because without that plea I wouldn't have known to go look for those scripts.

Katie Holmes says that the favourite books of her childhood were J.D. Salinger's Franny and Zooey and The Catcher in the Rye and Somerset Maugham's Of Human Bondage as well as all Maya Angelou's work. However, when she turned eight, she put aside childish things and spent a day or two reading Ulysses.

So I'm going to start a cult and people can be in it if they like to be cats or play with cats or play with cat toys." 3) Katy Perry's new perfume ad features her as an avenging warrior spritzing an evil emperor with her new fragrance, Killer Queen's Royal Revolution, until he turns into a kitten.

Orange fans seeing red over satire site's faux report

Don't worry, Orange is the New Black fans: Your favourite show about women in prison hasn't actually been cancelled. A site that's apparently supposed to specialize in satire called Empire News posted a story over the weekend that Netflix had cancelled the Emmy-nominated series, which is currently filming its third season. Naturally, fans online freaked out, because that's what going online is for. I guess everyone was supposed to know it was a hoax because of this patently ridiculous quote at the end of the article attributed to Netflix CEO Reed Hastings: "A woman's place is in the home, in the kitchen, taking care of children. A woman in jail? How does anyone watch this show in the first place?" That's ... just not good, even as satire. Hey, Empire News? You're doing it wrong.

Sharon Stone is a national treasure, if for no other reason than how she talks about her butt. The stunning 56-year-old recently told E! But now I'm going on vacation and I know what they're going to do. (The tabloids) are going to put a circle around my ass and do one of those crazy magnified pictures saying, 'What happened to her ass? It's a bag of cheese,'" she laments. "I would just like to say it's a fine triple crème brie! Right when they zoom in I should have a tattoo on my ass that says, 'You wish you could get a bite of this.'"

Poor excuses for staying in debt

Bad with money?

There are no good reasons for not getting yourself out of debt

GAIL VAZ-OXLADE
Gail blogs daily at gailvazoxlade.com

Every time I think I've heard it all, someone pops up with a new way to excuse the fact that their money management is in the crapper. Here are some of my faves:

We got a consolidation loan and paid off our credit cards, so we're doing better.

Really, you paid off your debt with other debt? That's not paid off, my little chickadee — that's delusional.

Consolidation makes sense when you reduce your interest costs and then work aggressively to repay the debt. But if you're sitting back smugly because you've reduced your payments so you have more money to spend on rubbish, I want to reach out and slap you.

Consolidating using a mortgage is one of the more time-honoured ways of making debt more expensive over the long term. Lots of people consolidate using the equity in their homes. Then they pretend that everything is OK, because now it's "mortgage debt" and that's good debt, isn't it? Hey, tell the truth. It's still consumer credit; it's just been shuffled to somewhere you don't have to look at it. And believe me, it's costing you.

I worked with one couple who re-mortgaged their home three times to cover

Deal with your debt by giving up just half an hour of couch-potato time twice a week for budgeting. ISTOCK their uncontrolled overspending. Over the life of their mortgage, they had increased their interest costs from about $150,000 to almost $600,000.

Sure it's a lot of debt, but hey, everybody's in debt, so what's the big deal?

And if everyone were running screaming off the side of a cliff, you'd do that, too, right?

There's no question that debt has become so commonplace that it seems like everyone's in it. And if you grew up in a family that had it all, including the debt, you may think this is "normal." I worked with one couple that was so comfortable with their debt that they had never made a mortgage payment from cash flow. Every single mortgage payment had come from their line of credit.

If debt seems like a normal state of being for you, it means you have to change your thinking. Debt is not normal for someone who is financially healthy. You can make the choice to remain delusional, or you can choose financial stability. The old way may be more fun, at least in the short term, but the new way will keep you and your family safe and sound.

I don't have time to budget.

Really, your most important resource and you don't have the time to manage it? Could it be that your priorities are a little skewed?

On average we spend about three hours every day watching TV. So you only need to reallocate a measly half-hour twice a week to money management to go from being a financial slug to smart about your money.

Close in hand with this goes, "You have to have money to make a budget work." One young lady wrote me to say that her parents had recommended she use a budget and her response was, "You have to have money to make a budget work, right Gail?" Believe it or not, she was asking me to tell her a budget was pointless. Really?

Sadly, people don't think that all that dough they bring in that goes to paying the rent or buying food is "money." For them, only the stuff they can spend indulging their whims is "money." And so they don't make a budget and look for ways to trim. Or perhaps it is because if they made a budget, they would discover just how much money they were blowing every month on stuff, and would have to change their behaviour. Lord forbid!

My partner is the problem.

I've met couples where one person is the major culprit in acquiring debt. The other person stands meekly by as Mr. or Mrs. I-have-to-have-everything charges them into a debt whole. They shrug and claim to have no ability to change their partner's behaviour. Here's my big question: Is this the way you're going to live the rest of your life, walking a tightrope, waiting for the axe to fall? And if you have children, do you think this is creating any sense of security for them?

For as many couples that I've met where one partner claims the other is the problem, I've met couples where they are both, in their own inimitable way, doing dumb things. One husband claimed his wife was the problem because she went shopping every day at work during lunch, bringing home items that she'd hide from him. He saw nothing wrong with dropping $10K on a new motorbike. That's a lot of skirts, dude!

If you're still making excuses about why you're in debt, maybe it's because you're not yet committed to getting out of debt. Some people aren't. They haven't heard the whistle blow that tells them the train is headed straight for 'em.

Facing
adversity?
Why we quit

LESSONS FROM
THE DESERT
Stéfán Danis
life@metronews.ca

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson learned from my experience running deserts.

Every day, someone we know quits their job, quits on their health, quits a marriage, or quits on themselves. It is an epidemic. In my experience of multi-day desert running events, while 20 to 40 per cent of athletes do not finish, once athletes pass their "hump days" they almost never quit. But when is hump day? In many ways, be it in a race or in life, when hump day occurs is arbitrary; we decide when it is. However, the quitting pattern is obvious.

Our "quitting quotient" — the likelihood we will give up on or abandon a project — is determined mainly by our mental relationship with what lies ahead. If the task feels insurmountable, our level of fighting spirit and motivation sinks. "I can't do another day — the worst has yet to come" are words I heard many times in the desert. Yet, at the same time, I heard just the opposite from other runners in the same situation: "I've passed hump day — the worst is behind me." The motivation levels of this second group of runners soared. Statistically, in a five-day desert race, where athletes run a marathon on each of the first four days and a double marathon on the fifth, most of the quitting occurs after days one and two, rarely after day three, and never after day four — although the next day is the most physically punishing. By then, quitting is no longer an option as we see "light at the end of the tunnel."

Sometimes you hit your "quitting quotient" earlier than expected. ISTOCK

Of course, life hands us many things that we are better off quitting if we perceive better and healthier opportunities elsewhere.

What the lesson is for all of us, however, when grinding through a rough patch in life or in the desert, is to adopt an "I will do this" mindset as opposed to hoping to get passed the elusive hump day.

A job hunting
guide for grads

GANDHI
life@metronews.ca

Now that graduation has come and gone, it's time for the Class of 2014 to jump-start the job search. It can be hard for new grads to figure out how best to sell themselves when their work experiences consist of part-time positions and internships. Caroline Ghosn is here to help. As the founder and CEO of Levo, an organization that mentors young women entering the workforce, she's often asked for tips and advice. Here are her suggestions for recent grads.

Show your resumé over and over again

"The biggest mistake new grads make is that they don't get a second set of eyes to look at their resumé," says Ghosn. She suggests finding three or four trusted friends or colleagues to review your resumé and make suggestions. "That sounds like a lot," Ghosn admits, "but your resumé is only going to change for the better. You look at your resumé over and over, and you start to miss things. The third or fourth editor will really help you tighten it up."

Grab those resumé and get out there. ISTOCK

Tell a story

Don't worry if you think your resumé is a little light on experience. "It's all about how to tell the story and making the story about your transferable skills," says Ghosn. "You have to figure out how you can connect the dots. Let's say you were the social chair of a student organization or a fraternity or sorority. Your skills would be managing timelines, budgets and logistics." And don't discount retail or food services positions. "I've never learned more about stakeholder management than when I was a waitress," Ghosn notes. "You learn how to approach people who want you to fix their problems immediately."

Be passionate

Don't worry if you appear a bit nervous at your first few interviews. "What interviewers are looking for is not someone that is stoic and cool as a cucumber," says Ghosn. "Interviewers are looking for passion, not perfection."

An interview wardrobe must-have

Ghosn says every new grad should have a good blazer in the closet to complete an appropriate business look. "It makes a casual outfit instantly more professional," she says.

Here's a great way to have your steak and eat it, too!

Lean meat is an excellent source of protein and is low in fat and saturated fat. The key to eating red meat is to enjoy it as a side to a meal rather than the main course. The leanest meats include top sirloin, flank, New York sirloin and beef tenderloin. You want to minimize the fatty steaks including rib-eye and porterhouse steaks.

This Asian-flavored salad combines Napa cabbage and romaine, along with sweet orange segments, sugar snap peas and toasted cashews.

The tasty light dressing has a base of a ginger-hoisin sauce that complements the salad beautifully.

If your guests love steak, you can easily double the portion since two ounces is acceptable in terms of calories and fat. Feel free to substitute grilled chicken breast, pork, shrimps or tofu for the beef.

Directions

1. Grill steak just until cooked

Ingredients

- 4 oz New York strip steak
  - 3 cups chopped napa cabbage
  - 3 cups chopped romaine lettuce

Germany's Goetze provides golden touch

World Cup final.

Late-game substitute creates extra-time magic as Germany foils Argentina once again

With two quick and sublimely deft touches, Mario Goetze ended Germany's 24-year wait for another World Cup title.

Goetze scored the winning goal in extra time to give Germany a 1-0 victory over Argentina on Sunday in a tight and tense World Cup final that came down to a few moments of individual skill.

Goetze, who wasn't born when West Germany beat Argentina in the 1990 final, controlled a cross with his chest in the 113th minute and in one fluid motion volleyed the ball past goalkeeper Sergio Romero and inside the far post from five yards out.

It was a goal that gave Germany its fourth World Cup title in its eighth final, and left Argentina star Lionel Messi still walking in the shadow of compatriot Diego Maradona, who led his country to the 1986 title.

Goetze went on as a substitute for Miroslav Klose toward the end of regulation time and the 22-year-old midfielder's fresh legs made the difference.

Andre Schuerrle broke down the left flank, sending his cross into the area, and the Bayern Munich player did the rest with a clinical finish.

"It's incredible. The team did it beautifully," said Manuel Neuer, who was voted the tournament's best goalkeeper. "At some point we'll stop celebrating, but we'll still wake up with a smile."

For Germany, the win ends a string of near misses since winning its last major title at the 1996 European Championship. The team lost the 2002 World Cup final to Brazil and lost in the semifinals in both 2006 and 2010.

Argentina had not been back in the final since that 1990 loss, and has now been beaten by Germany in the last three World Cups.

"This was our chance, and we felt that way. We couldn't do it. We have to lift our head

Near miss for Messi

Argentina's Lionel Messi missed a glorious chance in the 47th minute after sneaking behind Jerome Boateng and Mats Hummels on a perfect ball from teammate Lucas Biglia. The superstar's shot sailed just wide past German 'keeper Manuel Neuer.

It was the third World Cup final between these countries and had been billed as a matchup between the perfect team and the perfect individual, pitting Germany's machine-like unit against the brilliance of Messi.

But in the biggest game of his career, Messi came up short.

Messi threatened intermittently throughout the match, but was neutralized for long stretches.

His free kick in the 120th minute went well high.

When the final whistle blew, Germany players jumped on top of each other in a pile, while Messi, who scored four goals in the group stage but none in the knockout rounds, walked alone with his hands on his hips toward the centre circle.

Eighth loss in 10 games. As David Price adds to Toronto's negative streak in Tampa Bay, all crave the all-star break

Tampa Bay's David Price GETTY IMAGES

The Toronto Blue Jays have had enough of patched-up lineups, enough of David Price, and enough of baseball for a while.

Price scattered five hits in eight-plus innings to help the Tampa Bay Rays hand the Blue Jays their eighth loss in 10 games, 3-0 Sunday in the teams' final game before the All-Star break.

"It's an opportune time for us to push the rest button, for sure," Toronto starter R.A.

Dickey said. "Everybody's inching back toward being healthy. This gives us four days."

Price (9-7), who won his fourth consecutive start, was pulled after giving up a leadoff single in the ninth to Melky Cabrera. Cabrera moved up on a wild pitch by reliever Jake McGee to become the first Toronto runner in scoring position after the first inning.

"Everybody in baseball needs a break," Blue Jays manager John Gibbons said. "Everybody's been battling it out, everybody's worn-out tired, and we definitely need one."

Dickey (7-9) gave up two runs and five hits over six innings. Toronto hasn't won a road series against Tampa Bay since April 2007, or 22 sets.

"Please don't ask a question about the streak in Tampa," Gibbons pleaded.

Despite their recent struggles, the Blue Jays' 49 wins at the All-Star break are their most since 2006. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

Resist the urge to make value judgments about others. We all have different fates and you cannot know what is right for someone else. The only behaviour you should be concerned with is your own.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Act quickly if someone offers something you desire. It's OK to be cautious, but if you wait too long the opportunity could be offered to someone else.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

If you need to do something that is going to take a lot of physical energy, now is the time. Also, don't wait to be offered something you are in a position to take for yourself.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You know that everything will turn out for the best but it may be hard to convince the logical side of your mind. The way to overcome fear is through faith.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

The more others say you should be disciplined, the more you will go out of your way to rebel. There is no logical reason you should follow the rules just because others say you must.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may be apprehensive about the changes now taking place but if you go with the flow, nothing bad will happen.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You will be assertive and adventurous over the next 24 hours and that's good. Employers and other important people will be impressed by your can-do attitude.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Your imaginative powers will be strong today but that will only be good if you have a positive attitude. If you allow the unknown to scare you, over the next 24 hours you will be sent scurrying for cover.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

The planets encourage you to be inventive and if you are able to respond you will create something that will be praised.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Look for ways to turn new developments to your advantage. If you can do that, this should be an amazingly productive time for you.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You don't usually let your passions get the better of you but they will today. You won't care what others think about what you do or say. That is, you won't care today. Tomorrow you may be embarrassed!

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you respect others they will respect you. If you say or do things that others find offensive you can expect backlash.
